SILVA FAMILY FARM

Farmer Pablo came from Yucacani, a small town in the Mexican state of Guerrero when he was 14 to harvest strawberries in California. As the years passed, he grew concerned about the pesticides used on large commercial farms. Along with his wife Maura and their children, Pablo now grows organic strawberries, blueberries, and raspberries on five acres in the fertile Skagit Valley, avoiding toxic chemicals and using methods to preserve the health of their community's streams and rivers.
