RE: Students' Right to Wear Tribal Regalia

CONTACT: Henry Strom, Assistant Superintendent, Office of Native Education and Center for the Improvement of Student Learning

PURPOSE/BACKGROUND

In 2020, the Washington State Legislature affirmed inherent rights assured through tribal sovereignty and expressly provided that school districts must allow American Indian and Alaskan Native K–12 and higher education students who are members of federally recognized tribes to wear tribal regalia and objects of cultural significance along with or attached to a gown at graduation ceremonies and related events (RCW 28A.600.500). In addition, school districts and institutions of higher education are required, when necessary, to update relevant policies or procedures in accordance with this law.

School districts and public schools may not require such students to wear a cap if it is incompatible with the regalia or significant object.

In addition, House Bill 1393 (HB 1393) passed March 4, 2025, stating that school districts shall permit students to wear an item or object of cultural significance with or attached to their gown at high school commencements and other official graduation ceremonies and events.

Whereas RCW 28A.600.500 pertains to members of Federally recognized tribes, HB 1393 encompasses all students.

School district leaders and staff are encouraged to promptly consult with tribal nations and collaborate with Native American parent and family advisory committees and Native American education leaders to develop policies, procedures, and practices associated with the law. It is critical that districts work in a timely manner to resolve any potential issues regarding cultural inclusivity prior to district or school ceremonies and events.
